Corporate Policy and Mission

Five for South Sudan (FFSS) is a Canadian not-for-profit company with a goal to develop educational opportunities for children and adults in rural villages in Southern Sudan. It plans to do this in partnership with willing and receptive communities who must be active participants in the development process. FFSS will advise and train people, and design, fund and build infrastructure or capacity to help realize its goal.

The company seeks to work cooperatively with governmental institutions and in partnership with other non-governmental organizations (NGOs) so as to achieve the highest level of acceptance and success. As such it pledges to respect and adhere to the rules, regulations and guidelines that may exist or be developed by and within the new Republic of South Sudan as they relate to the operation of non-governmental organizations within the country; and further pledges to apply any and all relevant best-practices of successful NGOs with similar goals. The company will also comply with any and all rules regulations and guidelines for the operation of a not-for-profit company in the Country of Canada.

FFSS will employ practices that are sustainable, ethical and equitable and these practices will be implanted in any and all organizations and institutions that may be developed by FFSS. In the case of a school, the mission of FFSS will be to teach and create a desire to learn in an inviting and healthy environment. To nurture positive self-esteem through learning which is challenging, rewarding, relevant to everyday living and respectful of the culture and environment in which the school exists.
